On the 20th over 3,000 packages were taken in, lines being run out to the cargo boats, which were hauled in with the steam winch; The Hailoung's own cargo was put on deck on the evening of the 19th and morning of the 20th.

That was because the Yorkshire's cargo was struggle in which he (defendant) lost a diamond mostly tea and more valuable, and required greater eare, than that of the Hailoong. The Hailoong left for Amoy at 11 o'clock on the worning of the 21st September. Had it not been for this special service she would have left for Tamsai on the evening of the 15th. The time occupied n the round trip to Tameni and back is within four days. The value of the Hailoong is $60,000. The work entailed extra labour on all belonging to the vessel. The number of junks assisting the Yorkshire was from thirteen to fifteen: They could have carried on a son voyage from fifteen to twenty tons, and might have made the trip to at least three weeks to lighten the vessel if theyhad had to do it alone. Mr. H. C. A. Harris, chief officer of the Hai loong, gave evidence to a similar offect. This concluded the case for the Hailoung. On the other side Capinin Lyons was the only witness called and his examination was very brief. He said it was by no arrangement made with him that the Hailoong on the second occa-3 sion took the cargo instead of the Douglas. Al that he cared for was to get it out of the ship.

Douglas for the cargo. The Attorney-General then addressed the court and argued that no salvago services had been rendered by the Hailoong to the Yorkshire, but that on the other hand she left the vessel on both occasions in the same peril in which she found her. He referred to an authority as supporting his argument and showing that if one vessel left another in distress, although she might have a claim on any cargo she had salved, she could not claim for salvage service to the ship itself. Referring to the evidence, he argued that the labour by those engaged in transhipping the cargo was not heavy, there being an immense number of persons employed in doing what had to be done, and there was no risk whatever to the Hailoona, as she was anchored and perfectly under control. The cargo taken by the Hailoong on the second occasion might have been put on board the Douglas without interfering with the latter vessel's capacity for towing, and the last answer of Captain Lyons completely disposed of any claim the Hailoong might have for put minated, most of them with Japanese lanterns. ting her own cargo on deck. All this reduced the claim to one of salving a portion of the cargo only. The services were in the nature of work litle those concerned in them to any great remu-

Mr. Francis replied, and said that under the agreement made at Amoy all Captain Ashton the business connected with this department will had to do, after towing the junks from Amoy to the Yorkshire, was to lie by for twenty-four hours, and any work done during that time or subsequently was to be a matter of arrangement between the captains. Captain Ashton gave Captain Lyons distinct notice that he would have to be paid as for salvage services for any work he did while he was lying by. That understanding was embodied in the second agreement, which had not been disputed. The services rendered by the Hailoong had materially tended towards the ultimate salvation of the Yorkshire In the previous case the Attorney General had olaissed that the auchor which was got out on the port bow was the chief means of getting the ship off, and therefore the services rendered by the Hailoong in getting out that anchor must be regarded as material. the second occasion the Hailoong was on her regular voyage and at the request of the agents of the Yorkshire again went to her assistance, and remained till the 21st. On that occasion valuable assistance was rendered in passing lines. and facilitating the working of the junks. He submitted that the Hailoung had breudered material aid to the salving of the ship inde-

Largeny in the streets, robberies from shops and houses, and kidnapping of children ere all very prevalent just now in Canton. This may be taken as a proof not only of the incompetence of the guardians of the peace, but also of the poverty and distress existing in the city. In instauces lately children have been a large ransomasked for them by the kidnappers.

M. LESSAR'S SURVEY OF THE TRANS-CASPIAN TERRITORY

M. Lessar, who was employed by the Russian Government to survey the road from Askabad to Serakbs, and thence to Herat, gives an interesting account of the results of his second advanturous journey, from which he has just returned, The first, upon which M, Lesser set out in No. vember last, was the subject of communications to the Russian and French Geographical Societies in January and February of the present your. In April the traveller started once more to complete the work in band, and though only and the inhabitants both of the conquered ter-After several days of rather warm weather ritory and of the adjoining steppes. The stormhis visit to Merr and the wonders he there related of the White Czar's power and mercy quenched all desire to measure strength with the conquerers of Akhal Tekke. The Tekker Turkomans who had found refuge in Merv waited only to gather in the crops they had sown, and then turned their faces homeward, much to the relief of their entertainers, who have hardly enough productive land to feed thomselves. This country, and isolated cases of pillage, which had According to news from Kores, all seems to Persian frontier and on the roads to Khiva and be quiet there; General Wu has taken again Bokhara, henceforth ceased entirely. Deputacommand of the Chinese troops, which are on- tions from Merv and Tedjent assured the Russian? by the inhabitants towards their new neighbours, and, as a proof of sincerity, Kidseff, a soldier taken prisoner in the Khivan campaign, was restored to liberty, and the booty recently plundered from a caravan on the road to Khiva returned. In February the first Russian caravan entered Morv. and so complete was the change that had come over the country that a journey from Askhabad to Serskhs demanded no further escort than two or three servants armed with guns as a protection against chance robbers. M. Liesar, however, travelled with an escort of 20 well-mounted tekkes, who received 40 roubles a month and had to provide themselves in food and forage. Ten were armed with Berdan rifles. the rest with their own old fashioned muskets, but all carried in addition to these weapons, a whole arsonal of pistole, knives, and daggers. Leaving Askhabad on the 16th April, M. Lessar reached Scrakhs on the 21st, having stopped one day in Kaakhka to pick up the escort. The latter were allowed to travel by night for the sake of their horses, which can only walk or gallop, Lessar jogging on alone by day, and frequently meeting small parties of Turkomans and even solitary travellers, unarmed and mounted on asses, or even journeying on foot. In Attek two points, Lutfabad and Shilgyan, are occupied by Persian shules, subjects of the Shah, all the rest by Turkomans-Kaskhka and part of Kouren by the tribe Aliel, the others by Mory Tekkes. The whole of the population is quite recent, the Alieli having returned to their old habitations from Khiva, whither they had fied from the Persians, only after Tohernsieff's campaign in 1978, and the Tekkes being driven from Mery of late years by the pressure of over population. The people live to profit the trading possibilities of the Province | mostly in mud huts, the tents being few in numof Kuang-si. A FEAST IN THE WILDERNESS.

The special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph reports as follows from Ismailia :- " I received a summons to put in an appearance in gala attire at the Governor's palace, that I might have the honour of participating in a solemn feast given (Egyptian fashion) to Sir Garnet Wolseley by sundry Egyptian grandees. At the entrance to the house were stationed a posse of gentlemen in fezzes, prominent amongst whom was a stout personage in white, much embroidered with gold, who bowed gravely with hand to brow, and through an interpreter bade us consider all he possessed as our own. This turned out to be the Governor himself-an important functionary at ordinary times here in Ismailia, a cypher now; and presently be took us each by the hand and led us within a little garden, illuminated a giorno with lamps, in the centre of which a round table was spread, with places laid for nine diners, chairs, and knives and forks. Hors d'œuvres in little dishes as at a French restaurant, encumbers, gherkins, sardines, fresh butter-nothing new and original apparently, but none the less interesting to the half-starved. Glasses, too, suggestive of champagne, and, more delicious still, actually a bucket filled with shredded ice! Under stood. More salaams, more entreaties to take possession of everything, more grateful laying t hands on hearts, and then we sat down to await the coming of the guests of the evening. One's attention naturally turned to a fine-looking old man, with a closely olipped white beard, who was the Nestor of the Egyptian Parliament. infine of these the native condition will find the prime adviser of the young Khedive-a man so Egypt that he has been specially selected to socompany the march and explain to sheikhs and local magnates that the English Government mean well by the Egyptain people, and that such as are loyal to their Sovereign have nought to fear. A brave old man, as well as a wise-for when Arabi was first flinging out his rebel colours he tried hard to esjole this aged Minister to join bim, and at last, in baffled wrath, finding him steadfast in his loyalty, cried out, "Beware, or will kill you!" suiting the action to the word with drawn sabro. But the old man budged not Kill me if you will. I am old, and of little further use." he replied, simply, but so long as I live I will be faithful to my Sovereign. Near the grand old gentleman sat another, a splendidly stalwart specimen of a young Oriental -the man who by tast and promptitude saved the Khediye's life the other day at Alexandria: and next to him, again, all smiles and nods, stood an Oriental Turveydrop, general factotum, mas-Although the Chinese have existed as a nation | ter of the ceremonics, and interpreter. INGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDABIN PEONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word i fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterised Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely re-
